Police probe deaths of pair found in Ford

Duo found dead. A man and woman were reportedly shot to death in a car on the street yesterday.

Authorities are trying to determine who killed a man and a woman who were found dead inside a car in Chelsea early yesterday morning.

The man and woman were identified as Zouaoui Dani-Elkebir, 51, and Karima El-Hakim, 38, both of Everett.

Police responded to Crescent Avenue after they received an emergency call at about 4 a.m. When emergency crews arrived, they found Dani-Elkebir and El-Hakim dead inside a blue Ford LTD.

The Suffolk district attorney's office said investigators believe the deaths are suspicious, but released few details yesterday. The district attorney's office said the cause and manner of death would be formally determined by the medical examiner's office.

Both Dani-Elkebir and El-Hakim had been shot to death, the Globe reported, citing sources. Residents of the neighborhood of the murder scene told the Globe that they heard multiple gunshots and someone running past their home before police arrived.

After the duo was shot, the Ford apparently jumped the curb, ran through some shrubs and came to rest near a commercial building, according to the Globe. The car had a livery license plate and the driver's side window also appeared to be shot out.

Anyone with information can call 617-466-4843 or to remain anonymous text the word CHELSEA and information to TIP411(847411).

Shakeup sought over Weymouth navy base project

The board overseeing a major South Shore development has shown a lack of expertise necessary for the project, creating essentially a small town on an old U.S. Navy base in Abington, Rockland and Weymouth, according to Auditor Suzanne Bump.

South Shore Tri-Town Development Corporation CEO Kevin Donovan said the five-person board comprised of a fire lieutenant, a police official, a retired banker, a real estate advisor and Norfolk County Treasurer Joseph Connolly is "most definitely" qualified for the work, and said the Great Recession shared much of the blame for delays in the project. Fatal crash. Man pleads not guilty to killing Curry student with car

A 24-year-old Stoughton man pleaded not guilty yesterday morning from his hospital bed to drunken driving, motor vehicle homicide and other charges related to a fatal car crash that killed a 20-year-old Curry College cheerleader.

Sean Jackman was ordered held on $500,000 cash bail during his arraignment at Boston Medical Center, authorities said. He was in fair condition as of Monday afternoon.

Jackman was allegedly driving drunk and speeding when he crashed into a wall and tree early Saturday morning.

The crash killed his passenger, Evan Bard.

Bard, of Agawam, was a junior nursing student and member of the college's cheerleading team. She was pronounced dead at the scene, police said.

A months-long investigation led authorities to investigate the duo and learn that they alleged ran six businesses that were portrayed as massage parlors, but were really fronts so they could set up sexual encounters between clients and the women they employed.

The businesses include Mystic Health Center in Medford, Body Wellness Center in Reading and Asian Bodywork in Woburn.

IRS kept shifting targets in tax-exempt groups scrutiny

Findings. IRS agents changed their criteria while sifting through applications from groups seeking tax-exempt status to select ones for possible closer examination.

When tax agents started singling out nonprofit groups for extra scrutiny in 2010, they looked at first only for key words such as "Tea Party," but later they focused on criticisms by groups of "how the country is being run," according to investigative findings reviewed by Reuters.

At one point, the agents chose to screen applications from groups focused on making "America a better place to live."

Exactly who at the IRS made the decisions to start applying extra scrutiny was not clear from the findings, which were contained in portions of an investigative report from the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA).

Expected to be made public this week, the report was obtained in part by Reuters over the weekend as a full-blown scandal involving the IRS scrutiny widened, embarrassing the agency and distracting the Obama administration.

In one part of the report, TIGTA officials observed that the application screening effort showed "confusion about how to process the applications, delays in the processing of the applications, and a lack of management oversight and guidance." REUTERS

New Orleans. Police release photos of parade shooting suspect

New Orleans police yesterday released photos that they said show a suspect wanted in the shooting at a Mother's Day parade in which 19 people, including two children, were wounded.

The image singling out the suspect does not clearly show the face, and police, who released the photographs on YouTube, asked for the public's help in identifying and finding the person.

Ten men, seven women and a girl and a boy, both 10 years old, were hit when one or more people opened fire at the parade Sunday.

Police had earlier said they were looking for three suspects, adding that a motive for the shooting was unknown.

The photographs first show crowds of people in a street, and then the crowd is seen scattering and ducking. The final image focuses on what appears to be a man in a white shirt leaving the scene. REUTERS

Abortion doctor guilty on three murder charges

Abortion rights groups said Gosnell was an aberration and the case underscored the need for women to have access to safe and legal abortions./ PHILADELPHIA DAILY NEWS

Facts

According to witnesses, the babies were born breathing, moving and making sounds.

- Testimonies depicted a filthy clinic.
- Kermit Gosnell has been in jail since January 2011.

Verdict. Gosnell faces the death penalty after being charged with murder of three newborn babies.

Kermit Gosnell, the Philadelphia doctor who ran the now-shuttered Women's Medical Society Clinic, was found guilty yesterday of murdering three babies during late-term abortions.

Gosnell, 72, faces the possibility of the death penalty.

He was accused of delivering live babies during late-term abortions and then deliberately severing their spinal cords.

The jury heard five weeks of testimony in Common Pleas Court in Philadelphia and deliberated for 10 days.

Gosnell also was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the case of Karnamaya Mongar, 41, of Virginia, who died from a drug overdose after going to him for an abortion.

He also was found guilty of performing 21 abortions after 24 weeks of pregnancy at his clinic, which served mostly low-income women in a largely black community. It is legal in Pennsylvania to abort a fetus only up to 24 weeks into a pregnancy.

Eight other defendants have pleaded guilty to a variety of charges and are awaiting sentencing. REUTERS

Blue Ivy 2.0: Is Beyonce pregnant?

Everyone! Listen up! The New York Post is citing multiple sources that claim Beyonce and her husband Jay-Z are expecting their second child. And their reps are not responding to calls.

But here's why this is dubious: Beyonce is in the middle of a giant world tour. Millions and millions are on the line. "The Mrs. Carter Show World Tour" ends Aug. 5 in Brooklyn. People worship at the altar of B — but people shell out major bucks for tickets to see Beyonce doing her thing and getting all Sasha Fierce onstage, not a pregnant Beyonce having to sit in a chair to perform. (That is the exact opposite of Sasha Fierce; that is Sasha Convalescence.)

But, of course, she will probably strut through it — bump and all. Because if we haven't figured it out by now, Beyonce exists to make the rest of us feel terrible about ourselves.

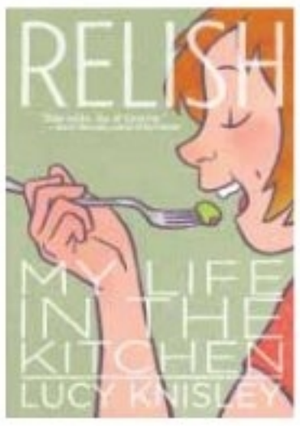
LUCY KNISLEY



In her delicious memoir, Lucy Knisley draws (and draws upon) key episodes in her life through food and recipes.

COOKING, ILLUSTRATED

For Lucy Knisley, the decision to create an illustrated memoir was easy. "Food is something that interests me, and comics are how I tell my stories, so it was a natural decision to make comics about food," she says about the impetus for her new memoir, "Relish: My Life in the Kitchen," a hybrid kitchen how-to and memoir. Here's how she cooked it up.

Each chapter is bookended with an illustrated recipe; how did you pick these recipes?

The recipes are simple and familiar to me and pertain to the chapter previous. I wanted to share some of my favorites, and allow readers to think about food abstractly, through the stories and then, more directly, through the recipes.

Which is your favorite food to draw? Which is the most challenging?

Favorite food to draw is probably the croissant- — they're such fun shapes, and I've had a lot of practice with drawing them. My least favorite is probably the kind of food that might taste delicious, but look like brown goo — like curry or stew. It's hard to get across what it is through drawing, and that can be frustrating.

Is there some food you just can't do?

Can't eat or can't draw? I think I could draw any food! I had the opportunity in Korea not long ago to try eating live octopus. It's a little dangerous, as the octopus can choke you on the way down if you don't fully chew it up first — and while I eat meat, I just couldn't chew up a live creature in my mouth — especially one so cute. Pass.

When did you realize that food was something to cherish rather than fear?

I've never feared food, always loved it. It's something inherent in my upbringing, to love and to be curious about food. There's a lot to fear nowadays, of course, but it's important to remember that food is a shared human experience and can open us up to new experiences that connect us with one another, which is not to be feared.

3 National parks to visit

When Yellowstone became our first national park in 1872, it was a uniquely American idea. Ever since, we've had a deep and abiding affection for them. Here are our picks for three to see this year.

DEB HOPEWELL FOR FODORS

3 Mesa Verde, Colo.

The pull of this park is its enduring mystery: Why did roughly 5,000 Anasazi simply disappear — eight centuries ago — from the cliffs and mesas that had been their home for more than 700 years? They left behind a large network of cliff dwellings, irrigation networks and artifacts that offer a fascinating glimpse into a society that inexplicably vanished.

3 Volcanoes National Park, Hawaii

Where else can you see the ground change before you, as molten lava destroys everything in its path, only to create new land as it reaches the ocean? Last month marked the fifth anniversary of the eruption within Kilauea volcano's Halema'uma'u crater, which blasted open a hole about 115 feet wide. Now that hole is nearly 520 by 700 feet — and growing.

PLUS

Must-see

Pinnacles, Calif.

Pinnacles is the newest national park, added in January. It's a popular destination for rock climbers and hikers, due to its many rocky spires and crags, but it's also home to more than 30 endangered California condors. And the chances of spotting one of these impressive birds — whose wingspans are nearly 10 feet — are very good.

Parenting is funny, says Jim Gaffigan

Books. "Being a parent is incompatible with just about everything, if you want to do it right," the comic notes.

As a nationally touring comic, Jim Gaffigan is no stranger to hectic schedules and sleepless nights. His new book, "Dad Is Fat," adds to an extensive career. In it, Gaffigan applies his trademark self-effacing humor to observations about parenting. He'd like you to buy a copy so that his seven-member family can finally upsize from their jam-packed two-bedroom place in Manhattan.

How crazy is life with five kids under 8 in a two-bedroom?
It is insane. But everyone who lives in New York or a metropolitan area is sacrificing a lot of space. No one moves to New York because they can get more space. But I like convenience too much! I can put my kids to bed and 10 minutes later be onstage somewhere.

What was your thought process while writing the book?
I wanted this book to be observational and substantive. And I focused it on hopefully being funny. I didn't want it to be completely foreign from my stand-up. As far as parenting goes, I have no idea what I'm doing! This is not an advice book, a confessional or a complaint.

Have your children seen your comedy?
I have a 7-year-old and an 8-year-old, and they have an idea of what I do. It's a very strange occupation to attempt to explain to a kid. As a comedian, you also have an additional parenting crisis: You have to teach kids to be polite and not be joking around all the time.

You have a famous bit about Hot Pockets. Do your kids like them?
No. They've never even had them!

Don't forget to involve third party

Re: "Noisy neighbors driving you crazy? How to deal" (Metro, May 13) Ms. Schneiderman neglects to mention that you might have to get the Human Relations Department involved if the harrassment continues. They are required to interview both parties and resolve things. Also, you can get names in case you have to file a private criminal complaint. It can be hard to get renters' names.

Catholic canonization is hypocritical

How nice that Pope Fancis has elevated to sainthood hundreds of Catholics who were slain for refusing to convert to Islam. Now it would be nice, too, if he could do something in recognition of the vast thousands who were killed because they refused to convert to Catholicism.

I. MILTON KARABELL, VIA EMAIL

Sexualization is skin-deep

Re: "It's not the skin, it's perception" (Metro, May 10-12) Geoffrey Palmer's words were typical soft-sexism. He refers to "showing skin" as something that women specifically should do and subsequently says that "the burka" is the opposite of being "socially liberated." He encourages women to be dumb stereotypes. Conservative ways of attire have been labeled an enemy by being called "prudish." Don't think showing lots of skin doesn't have sensual meaning in a highly sexual world.

Choke's on Toronto as B's storm back to win

NHL playoffs. The Bruins erased a 4-1 deficit in minutes to storm back and stun the Maple Leafs in overtime, 5-4.

When the night was done, Zdeno Chara and the Bruins stood victorious over Toronto. / GETTY IMAGES

The Bruins refused to be labeled with the "choke" tag last night and instead plastered it on the foreheads of all 18 active members of the Toronto Maple Leafs. With some fans already getting a jump on I-93 traffic, the Bruins chipped away late in the third period of a stunning Game 7 and wound up winning in overtime as Patrice Bergeron's rifle of a shot flew past Toronto goaltender James Reimer in a 5-4 victory that will be recalled for decades to come.

The furious Bruins comeback was captained by Bergeron, Milan Lucic and Nathan Horton, the first of whom knotted the game at 4 with just 51 seconds left in regulation. Lucic, who also assisted on Horton's goal 9:18 into the third, scored at the 18:39 mark in the final regulation frame on the goal which gave B's fans legitimate hope for the unprecedented rally.

For much of the night, many Bruins fans were likely discussing what the team should do this offseason as old friend Phil Kessel, accompanied by Nazem Kadri, silenced the TD Garden crowd early in the third period as Kessel hit a wide-open net off a rebound 2:09 into the third and Kadri also netted a rebound on a 2-on-1 three minutes later to make it 4-1.

Nathan Horton's strike 9:18 into the third gave B's fans hope for a comeback, but it never materialized.

The Bruins' power play continued to come up empty early on as Boston did not have a power play shot on goal through the first two periods.

Meanwhile, Toronto's Cody Franson was having a career night as he scored for the second time off a perfectly set-up screen 5:48 into the second period. It was the first time in Franson's career that he had a two-goal game.

Another sign that it might not be the Bruins' night early in the game was when Lucic was sent to the penalty box, without Dion Phaneuf, for roughing at the 13:02 mark of the second period.

Boston's Matt Bartkowski had the Garden crowd juiced early on as his wrister blew past Toronto goaltender James Reimer just 5:39 into the contest.
